RURAL ORGANISATIONS IN SOUTH AFRICA:
A DIRECTORY

Barry Streek

Saldu Working Paper No. 57

Cape Town

October 1983
* This appendix of 'Additional Organisations' was compiled after the main index was completed. The information comes from various sources but mainly from the well-produced 'A Directory of Community Development Projects and Agencies in KwaZulu and Natal' by S.W. Dube (University of Zululand).
INTRODUCTION

The majority of South Africans, about 54% according to Charles Simkins in a 1981 Saldru report, live in those areas which have variously been described as 'reserves', 'bantustans', 'homelands' or 'black national states'. The overwhelming majority of these people survive in grim poverty. Outside the homelands, but still in the rural areas, there are many people whose lives are also characterised by a struggle for survival.

One of the major challenges facing South Africa today is that of poverty and what should be done about it. The long-term solution lies in the distribution of resources - in the nature of political and economic power. However, there are a number of organisations in the rural areas trying to do what they can within the political and economic realities of today. They are often in remote areas where isolation makes communication with groups and people difficult. They are often desperately short of money, technical expertise and other resources. They often make mistakes. But they, whatever their strategies, are trying to do something about rural poverty in South Africa.

This publication is the first attempt to list those organisations. It is hoped that it will give some idea of who is active in the rural areas and that it will contribute to breaking down the isolation of those dedicated people who are working in those organisations.

Because it is the first time such a publication has been compiled, there are bound to be mistakes and omissions. I apologise for these but the problems of remoteness and communication were substantial. This publication should, therefore, be regarded as a first draft. A second, more accurate and more comprehensive, list of these organisations is planned. Provision has been made in this volume for organisations to submit correct and updated information for incorporation into the next edition. It is hoped that organisations will take the opportunity to provide more adequate information.
It is also intended in the second volume to provide a list of organisations which are providing financial assistance to groups in the rural areas, particularly as the struggle for funds is one of the major problems facing organisations. However, it is important that this information is accurate before it is published.

Wherever possible, the addresses, telephone numbers and contact people in the rural organisations has been provided. It was not possible to obtain this information for all organisations. In particular, the World Vision organisation felt that any contact with its projects should be conducted through its headquarters in Johannesburg.

Another problem with the compilation of this list was simply definitional: what is an organisation? In practical terms, there is no easy answer. Some projects may simply be extensions of church missionary work with no visible existence on their own. Others may be names given to particular aspects of a single organisation's work. In the end, I have opted for a vague definition. The list includes those bodies which appear to have a structure and existence separate from their parent, donor or supporting bodies. It also includes a separate list of government sponsored bodies, which are basically parastatal, but it does not include government departments. Government schools are, therefore, excluded from any list, but creches and pre-schools which have to raise their own funds and are not directly controlled by government are included. Other than the parastatal organisations, commercial companies have also been excluded. There are certainly some commercial companies involved in rural development but it proved impossible to compile adequate information on them.

Geographic restraints have also been imposed. Except for two groups which may be of interest to organisations in South Africa, projects in Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland as well as Namibia have been excluded. This list is intended to reflect those organisations working in the rural areas of South Africa, including the homelands.
The compilation of this list has inevitably involved a large number of people, too many to be named, but their support was motivated by an overall desire to assist those groups who are trying to do something about poverty in the rural areas and to help overcome their isolation. It is hoped that this publication will contribute to those intentions.

ORGANIZATIONS

ACAT (Africa Co-operative Action Trust)

Address: Acat Southern Africa
P.O. Box 1743
Pietermaritzburg

Telephone: (0331) 52302

Contact: Founder-Member: Dr. L. McCrystal (Chairman)
Transkei Director: John Saulez
KwaZulu Director: Von van der Linde
Ciskei Official: Rev. E. Germiquet

Objectives:
(i) Self-help schemes in rural areas
(ii) Promote savings clubs
(iii) Training people in administrating clubs
(iv) Improved farming methods
(v) Promoting Christianity
(vi) Water development projects
(vii) Savings projects

Acat was born out of concern for the future of South Africa after 1976 Soweto riots and based on the Christian principle of 'Show a man your faith by the things you do'.

Acat's Strategy: to plan and promote INTEGRATED RURAL DEVELOPMENT in Africa and to function as a communicator, motivator, catalyst, a co-ordinator amongst and between Christians, churches, governments, private sector and other concerned organisations or institutions.

In the actual field of rural development, Acat's function is as a training organisation and makes use of the concept of 'Training Multiplicatory' because of the immensity of the task and to best apply available resources.

It is the responsibility of the local Board to negotiate with government to extend an invitation to Acat - South Africa to act as the government's rural development agency.

Acat is compiling a handbook for subsistence farmers to produce their own balanced diet. Acat has 600 savings clubs in KwaZulu and 209 savings clubs in Transkei. Average membership is 30 per club - 18 000 in KwaZulu. The savings clubs may graduate to become future co-operatives.

The challenge in Acat is that we will continue to produce the results to motivate 'Pro-Tech' missionaries (Professional and Technical Christians) to join us as the work expands, governments to appoint us as their rural development agents and to get the private sector to support us financially to meet our budget needs.

Has produced booklets:
1. Better nutrition for your family
2. ACAT - Savings Clubs
3. The traditional balanced diet
4. How to prepare a balanced diet
5. Energy for domestic use
6. Bio-climatic regions
7. Farmers calendar for crop protection
8. How to store surplus crops
9. Family budgeting
10. Staple food - package programme
11. Vegetable - package programme
12. Poultry - package programme
13. Rabbits - package programme
14. Milk production
15. Fruit trees
16. Trees - building and fire wood
17. Water development
18. Veld and pasture management
19. Soil conservation

         Mrs. J. Holcroft (ARDRI Documentation Centre)

Objectives:
(i) Training in agricultural extension and rural development: in order to ensure that courses at all levels meet the real needs of rural development it is essential to receive feedback information on extension and rural development problems in the national states. It is clear that the general principles of extension which pertain to adult education can be applied to all organisations concerned with community and rural development in the national states. All courses have clearly defined objectives designed to meet the needs of organisations which send people to university for extension and rural development training.
(ii) Research: it is fundamental that the teaching of agricultural extension and rural development be tied to research into the extension and rural socio-economic problems faced by national states. Because of scarce resources, research must be directed at solving specific problems with the aim of initiating and monitoring vitally needed extension and rural development programmes in the various states.

(iii) Documentation Centre: aims to build up authoritative body of material for the use of students, staff and interested individuals and organisations throughout southern Africa.

Four objectives accepted by KwaZulu Government and Physical Planning Office of the Prime Minister

(i) Land capability analysis for KwaZulu. KwaZulu is in urgent need of a positive land use strategy, which recognises the prime importance of local production, but at the same time safeguards soil and importance of food production. The Institute will initiate the regime of surveys relevant natural resources, leading to an assessment of the optimum, sustainable, rural land use strategy for each region, with the ultimate objective of moving away from unplanned subsistence level agriculture and creating employment opportunities in a rural environment.
(ii) Research. The Institute will initiate research associated with the formation of a computer based natural resources data bank.

(iii) Co-ordination of integrated resource planning between Natal and KwaZulu. The Institute will encourage regular exchange of information between potential land user agencies.

(iv) Education. The Institute provides a Master's course in Resource Planning (Master of Resource Planning)

University of Cape Town
Private Bag
Rondebosch

Telephone: (021) 698531 Ext. 440

Contact: Professor F.A.H. Wilson (Director)
Mr. D.B. Horner (Deputy Director)

Objectives:
An increasing number of people are coming to see that study of the political economy of South Africa must not be done on the assumption that the problems there are absolutely different from those facing other parts of the world. Indeed it can be argued that far from being an isolated, special case South Africa is a model of the whole world containing within it all the divisions and tensions (black/white; rich/poor; migrant/nonmigrant; capitalist west/third-world; etc.) that may be seen in global perspective. It is one on which far more research work needs to be done, and about which further understanding of the forces at work is urgently required. In order to attempt to contribute to such an understanding the Labour and Development Research Unit was established.

Saldrbu has six major, inter-related, concerns;

(i) Stimulation of research: such research whether by post-graduate students, university staff, or other specialists to take various forms.

(ii) Communication: it is a basic premise of the unit's existence that research should be policy orientated. In other words topics are chosen and analysed in order to provide people in general, and policy makers in particular, with a clearer understanding of the forces at work in a given situation, together with some idea of the possible consequences of different proposals made for the improvement of that situation.
(iii) Consultation: this is of two sorts.
1. Telephone consultance: answering requests for factual information and for clarification of issues currently under public debate.
2. The provision for a fee, of expert opinion in the form of a written report.
(iv) Resource Centre: data bank of clippings from newspapers around the country, selection of books and journals. Monitoring and filing of relevant articles, statistics.
(v) Industrial Relations: ways and means of linking together scholars, businessmen, labour leaders and others, in order to examine and discuss problems of industrial relations in an atmosphere of mutual trust.
(vi) Training: an explicit aim of the unit is to find ways and means of training young South Africans of all races as research workers, able to dig up social and economic facts and analyse their significance.
Has so far published 3 books and 48 Working Papers.

Cnr Shamrock and Main Streets
Florida Extension
1710

Telephone: (011) 6742043

Contact: Stan Chilvers (Executive Director)
John Allwood (Field Director)
David Cuthbert (Support Director)

Objectives:
World Vision of Southern Africa was initially established to sponsor children. In the early 1970s, a full-time office was established in Johannesburg with both fund-raising and field operations. Since 1977, Ministries of Emergency Relief Development Aid, Evangelism and Leadership Enhancement have been added to traditional child care work.

The emphasis of our activity has now moved to the comprehensive development of communities, urban and rural, across the sub-continent. It is essential to enable communities to overcome a wide variety of problems if they are to improve their quality of life and eventually achieve self-reliance.
In community projects World Vision seeks to deal with the whole of man - spiritual, mental, physical and social, on the pathway to self support. In Southern Africa the number of projects now exceeds 170. All are run by concerned Christians. Some are supported financially, while others are World Vision Projects.

SOUTHERN AFRICA LABOUR & DEVELOPMENT RESEARCH UNIT

To anybody interested in what is happening in Southern Africa at the present time, it is clear that an understanding of changes taking place in the field of labour is crucial. The whole debate about the political implications of economic growth, for example, revolves very largely around different assessments of the role of black workers in the mines and factories of the Republic. Many of the questions with which people involved in Southern Africa are now concerned relate, in one way or another, to the field generally set aside for labour economists to cultivate. The impact of trade unions; the causes of unemployment; the economic consequences of different educational policies; the determination of wage structures; the economics of discrimination; all these and more are matters with which labour economists have been wrestling over the years in various parts of the world.

At the same time there are many who would argue that these issues are far wider than can be contained within the narrow context of 'labour economics'. These issues, it is pointed out, go to the heart of the whole nature of development. In recent studies, commissioned by the International Labour Office, of development problems in Columbia, Sri Lanka, and Kenya, for example, leading scholars have identified the three crucial issues facing these countries as being poverty, unemployment, and the distribution of income. Thus the distinction between labour and development studies is becoming more blurred as economists come face to face with problems of real life in the Third World.

It is here too that an increasing number of people are coming to see that study of the political economy of South Africa must not be done on the assumption that the problems there are absolutely different from those facing other parts of the world. Indeed it can be argued that far from being an isolated, special case, South Africa is a model of the whole world containing within it all the divisions and tensions (black/white; rich/poor; migrant/nonmigrant; capitalist west/third-world; etc.) that may be seen in global perspective. Be that as it may, the fact remains that the economy of Southern Africa (for the political and economic boundaries are singularly out of line with each other) is one of the most fascinating in the world. It is one on which far more research work needs to be done, and about which further understanding of the forces at work is urgently required. It is in order to attempt to contribute to such an understanding that Saldu is issuing these working papers.
